...distinctly mid-weight but the payoffs are elegance and nuance. This flows and slips and creates its own little world of flavour and feel; berries, cream and spices the conduits. A piece of Barossa craft.

Smooth pastry-like tannins and keenly struck balance...

THE REAL REVIEW

Deep red colour with a tinge of purple. The bouquet is earthy, oak-tinged and herbal, with some hints of silage. The palate is full-bodied, round, ample and fleshy, with weight and depth but a certain lack of clarity or definition. Good volume of flavour, but it is straightforward, with a touch of chew. It could reward some cellaring.
